From: WIRED
To: gterry@bakersfieldpd.us
Subject: How tech companies are shaping the rules governing AI
Date: Saturday, May 18, 2019 2:43:42 PM

View this email in your browser

5.18.19

bottles of bleach

BEAR SPRAY

Amazon Is Building Special Warehouses

for Hazardous Items

BY LOUISE MATSAKIS

Everything from glitter hair spray and nail polish remover to bear repellent will soon ship out of specially designed fulfillment centers.

Dyson V11

PRODUCT REVIEW

The Dyson V11 Is the Cordless Vac of My Dreams

BY ADRIENNE SO

This cordless vacuum will plow through your home's dust

bunnies like Furiosa through a pack of hapless War Boys.

Wall-e

IDEAS

Climate Adaptation Isn’t Surrender. It’s Survival

BY MOLLY WOOD

Yes, the world needs to reduce carbon emissions, but that's not enough. Technologists need to step in and start developing workarounds of all kinds.

Security, Artificial Intelligence, Facial Recognition

REAL INFLUENCE

How Tech Companies Are Shaping the Rules Governing AI

BY TOM SIMONITE

An industry group representing Microsoft, Facebook, and Apple urged EU policymakers not to draw "red lines" around specific uses of AI.

GET WIRED

Get 12 months of WIRED for just $10.

Unlimited access to WIRED.com.

Subscribe now

DEPTH OF FIELD

In Alabama, The Handmaid's Tale Is a Haunting Metaphor

BY JASON PARHAM

As the state passed its anti-abortion bill, protestors evoked Margaret Atwood's dystopian novel.

group of people crossing the street

PRIVACY

Some US Cities Are Moving Into Real-Time Facial Surveillance

BY GREGORY BARBER AND TOM SIMONITE

Chinese authorities apply facial-recognition programs to surveillance videos to identify subjects. Now a report says Chicago and Detroit have purchased their own systems.

soldiers and daenerys targaryen from Game of Thrones

TV

What We Need From the Game of Thrones Finale

BY WIRED STAFF

It's a lot to ask of one episode, but here's what should happen.

scavenger sorts waste in landfill

POLLUTION

Now Ocean Plastics Could Be Killing Oxygen-Making Bacteria

BY MATT SIMON

The toxins that leach into seawater severely affect bacteria that provide perhaps 20 percent of Earth's oxygen. That's where things get complicated.

Sign up for the WIRED Gadget Lab newsletter

SIGN UP

Get the Gadget Lab Newsletter

Sweet deals and tasty recommendations in your inbox on Thursdays. Sign up!

This e-mail was sent to you by WIRED. To ensure delivery to your inbox (not bulk or junk folders), please add our e-mail address, wired@newsletters.wired.com, to your address book.

View our Privacy Policy
Unsubscribe